INFORMATION PRACTICES

A guide to how our agency collects and uses your personal information – our responsibilities and your rights

WORKING WITH
FAMILY & CHILDREN'S SERVICES
BROCHURE SERIES

Family & Children's Services of Guelph and Wellington County (FCSGW) is responsible for child protection in Guelph and Wellington. FCSGW collects, uses and stores information about the families we work with. Starting in January 2020, an Ontario law protects your personal information relating to the services you receive from our agency. Here's what you need to know about the information we collect, and how we use it.

Information on record

We keep records about you and your family

Our records may include personal information about you, your children and other members of your family. The information in our records may include information such as your date of birth and contact information. It may also include details about your physical and mental health, employment history, court documents, reports and other pieces of information that help us to provide you with service.

Your information is shared securely

The information we collect, use and share is in accordance with Ontario law. Sometimes the information is used to provide care for children who are in foster care or kin care, or to assess and approve homes for children who cannot remain with their families. Information may be securely shared with another Children's Aid Society (CAS) to provide child protection services.

Service providers receive limited information

Outside of the CAS network, we are careful with how information gets shared. Sometimes service providers receive information from us that is necessary for them to deliver services.

Your right to make your own information privacy decisions

When you don't get to decide

As a child protection agency, FCSGW does not need your consent to collect, use or share information about you when we are working to assess, eliminate or reduce a risk of serious harm. Sometimes police, government agencies and people involved in court cases with our clients ask us for information. If we are legally permitted or required to provide the information, we do not need your consent.

Sometimes, you get to decide

In situations where we are required to ask for your permission to collect, use or share information about you, you may choose to say no. If you say yes, you may change your mind at any time. Once you say no, we will no longer collect, use or share your information when there is an option.

When others can act as substitute decision-makers

When there is a right to consent, you may make your own decisions if you are "capable," no matter how old you are. You may be capable of making some information privacy decisions and not others. If you are not capable, a substitute decision-maker will make your information decisions for you. A person with custody of a child may make information and privacy decisions in some cases, unless the capable child says otherwise.

Your right to confidentiality and access

Our commitment to confidentiality

We are required by law to keep your personal information private and secure. We have to protect your information from loss or theft and make sure no one looks at it or does something with your information if they are not allowed. If there is a privacy breach, we are required by law to tell you.

How we retain information

We keep most of the information collected because it might be necessary for future cases, and because former service recipients may ask to see their records.

How to access your information on file

You have the right to access the personal information we hold about you that relates to a service provided to you. If you need a copy of your service records, please contact us, see box below.

How to correct your information on file

We try to keep your personal information accurate and, when we are currently involved with you, up-to-date. If you disagree with what is recorded, we will assess your concerns. If we agree that the information is incorrect, we will make a note of the correction in the record. There may be times when we disagree on facts or about our professional assessment related to you and your family. If this is the case, we may not change the information, but we will ask you to write a statement of disagreement, and we will add it to your record.
